Successful Victory Loan

BY OVER SUBSCRIBING the recent Victory Loan, Canadians showed that without doubt they are solidly behind the men in the armed services, and the war effort at home. This was the third time that the people of Canada have been asked to subscribe their savings for war purposes, and the drive came at a time when taxes are heavier and are affecting a greater part of our population than ever before in our history. Yet more people subscribed to this loan than to any previous one and it is said that many of those who bought bonds in this drive were investing in war savings for the first time. Over subscribed by more than two hundred million dollars, the loan, which opened with an objective of $750,000,000 was described by those in charge of it, as the most successful one ever held. The conclusion of the loan campaign coincided with the beginning of the great Allied offensive in Egypt and North Africa and its reaffirmed the faith of the Canadian people in the cause for which we are fighting, and their conviction in a final victory for the United Nations.

Voluntary Work Is Appreciated

Officials in charge of the loan have drawn attention to the many voluntary services given by people in all walks of life to the promotion of the loan campaign and to the actual work of selling the bonds. All across Canada, these people gave freely of their time and to them should be given much credit for the success of the drive. Canadian entertainers, joined on numerous occasions by outstanding personalities from the United States, worked hard, at no personal gain, to keep the loan before the public. Thanks were likewise expressed to the churches and the press across Canada for emphasizing the importance of the loan. In every community, large numbers of men and women, many of them very busy with affairs of their own, spent long hours canvassing homes and offices in selling the bonds. To all these people gratitude is due for the success of the loan, and they may feel that they have made a very important contribution to Canada's part in the winning of the war.

Bonds Regarded As A Trust

From many sources it has been learned that purchasers of these bonds to regard them as a wartime trust and to retain them except in cases of extreme necessity. There are instances in which investors have found it hard to maintain the standard of self-denial they set for themselves when purchasing their bonds, and they have subsequently withdrawn their money. While these bonds may be easily transformed into cash when money is urgently needed, investors are asked to remember at all times the purpose of the loan, and to refrain from cashing in the bonds, at least until the war is won. Not only is it important to the war effort that this money be left with the government, but it is also to the interest of the investors to leave it there. While every effort is being made to plan for economic stability in the post-war era, there will be a period of readjustment for many workers, and a reserve of war savings may prove to be of practical as well as patriotic value. "Nothing Matters Now But Victory" was the slogan of the drive and Canadians showed that they were solidly behind this sentiment when they so enthusiastically over subscribed the large objective set for them.

Something Unusual

Famous Actor's Performance Described By New Kind Of Critic

William Faversham was playing in "The Squaw Man" in St. Louis. The dramatic critic on a certain morning newspaper described in considerable detail how Mr. Faversham wore his hair and the way his neck was shaved. His acting was scarcely mentioned. Later in the week a cub reporter on the same journal interviewed the actor and among other things, inquired, "What did you think of the criticism of your play in our paper?"

"Well," replied Faversham, "I have played 'The Squaw Man' in every important city in the United States, but this is the first time a barber was ever sent to criticize the play."

If you think blood transfusions are modern, says Neal O'Hara, be informed that back in 1492 when Pope Innocent VIII was dying, he was given transfusions from three youthful volunteers. They were unsuccessful, however, quite possibly because in those days blood wasn't typed or the method of infusion was too crude. But the ancient Roman physician still had the right idea.

Climb Roofs And Cut Swastika Out Of Nazi Flags

The Czechs are known as excellent gymnasts and sportsmen, but the latest fad of the young Czech sportsmen is causing the Nazis great trouble. According to a report published by Nase Noviny in London and based on information given by a lady who succeeded in escaping from the "Protectorate" to a neutral country, Czech boys take great pleasure in climbing the roofs of public buildings where Nazi flags are unfurled in order to cut out the swastika and leave a round hole as the symbol of Nazism. Special guards were assigned to guard the Nazi flags, but so far no culprit has been detected.

Serious Problem In Respect To Securing Substitutes For Fats And Oils Needed In Wartime

A POUND of butter, a can of paint, a cake of soap—at first glance they seem to have little in common, yet they represent the three largest classes of oil and fat products and the three principal uses of these substances. Oils and fats are used mainly in the manufacture of foods, industrial products and soaps while smaller amounts are used for miscellaneous specialized services. Wide as is the variety of these products it is equalled by the variety of raw materials. Among the sources of fat we find land animals, providing milk, tallow, lard, etc., a marine animal—the whale, several species of fish and hundreds of plants, including fruits, nuts and a few vegetables such as soy-beans.

The processes of manufacture may be compared to the canalization of a large number of raw materials into an equally large number of finished products. The raw material for any one of the products may, however, vary within wide limits. In no other group of commodities is such a degree of substitution possible. Animal, vegetable and mineral oils can be employed for the same purposes. Mineral oils replace the others mainly in soap making, but animal and vegetable oils and fats are generally interchangeable. This is not to be taken to imply that one oil or fat is as suitable for all purposes as any other, but as a broad statement it remains accurate, despite the fact that each contains components particularly suitable to some particular use.

As a result of this interchangeability the demand and supply situation even in normal times is extremely complicated. The market position of a fat or oil is not based simply on its supply and demand but on a delicate balance among many commodities. In war-time, however, the possibility of such interchanges makes substitutions and adjustments simpler than in the case of most groups of commodities. Since fats and oils differ mainly in the fact that at normal temperatures one is a solid and the other is a fluid, the terms can be used according to the applicability in a particular reference. Fats and oils are in fact so closely related chemically that they can be converted one into another by a process of hydrogenation. This process permits, for example, the transformation of vegetable oils into shortening and margarine, which are solid in form.

While total world supplies of oils and fats are large, the problem of distribution has been made serious by the fact that areas of production and consumption are often widely separated, by the shortage of shipping facilities and by Japanese conquests in the Far East. Malaya, the Philippines and the Dutch East Indies had become the most important centre of production of coconut oils, copra and palm oils, while supplies of tung oil, an important ingredient of paint, had come almost entirely from China. Large quantities of peanut and other vegetable oils are available in India and West Africa, but the shipping problem is serious.

Thus there are two problems to be solved, that of the producing countries which are still free from Japanese occupation and that in the consuming countries particularly Great Britain, the United States and Canada. Such countries as India and China now find themselves with enormous supplies of oil products which they have been in the habit of shipping abroad. In India a special committee of the Indian Board of Scientific and Industrial Research is studying new uses for peanut oil. It is reported that possibilities exist for its use as fuel for diesel motors and as lubricants for internal combustion engines. In China tung oil is employed in the manufacture of oilcloth and for road surfacing. It is also reported that, through cracking processes, it can provide substitutes for kerosene and gasoline.

From the point of view of consuming countries the problem is securing substitutes for oils no longer available and utilizing to the best advantage our existing supplies to provide food and other products. In order to ensure the greatest efficiency in procurement and distribution a programme of unified purchasing has been arranged by Great Britain and the United States. It was announced on September 28th by the Combined Food Board of the two countries, that in the future the United States would purchase all the oil and fat supplies in certain regions of the world and Great Britain in other areas. The purchases of these two governments will be allocated among the United Nations according to the recommendations made by the Combined Food Board and accepted by the governments in question. Under this agreement Great Britain will be the exclusive purchaser on behalf of all the adhering governments of (a) all animal fats in Argentina and Uruguay (b) oilseeds and oils and fats in British Empire countries except those located in North or South America including the Caribbean Islands (c) oilseeds and oils and fats in Fighting French Africa and the Belgian Congo. The United States on the other hand will be the exclusive purchaser of (a) all oilseeds and oils and fats in North and South America except animal fats in Argentina and Uruguay (b) copra in Tahiti and other Fighting French Pacific Islands, (c) all oilseeds and oils and fats in Portuguese Africa, Spanish Africa and Liberia. This method of unified purchasing will permit the best use to be made of all available supplies.—Extract from Royal Bank of Canada Letter.

A Stupid Idea

Germans Forget Nations Would Not Always Submit To Slavery

When we think of the German character as disclosed in this war we think first of its identification with sheer gangsterism, its atrocious cruelty, its ruthless inhumanity. We are driven also to think of its illimitable stupidity. If the Germans were to achieve the impossible and win the war, incorporating the conquered nations into the Reich, it is incredible that they do not see how they would, in that event, be living upon an undying volcano. Only an ingrained stupidity can account, in the last analysis, for their murderous execution of hostages, such monstrous acts as the tragedy of Lidice, their separation of children from their fathers and mothers, the speech of Goering about feeding his countrymen first, in short their steady sowing of the dragon's teeth with which they will ultimately have to reckon. It is an awful state of mindlessness which seems to have invaded the Germans.—New York Herald Tribune.

Tot's Menagerie Fun To Make

by Alice Brooks

Start these now to have them ready in plenty of time to put into some tot's stocking. They're toys the smallest budget can handle for they use so little material. Pattern 7424 contains a transfer pattern and instructions for making 3 toys; illustrations of stitches; materials needed.

To obtain this pattern send twenty cents in coins (stamps cannot be accepted) to Household Arts Department, Winnipeg Newspaper Union, 175 McDermot Avenue E., Winnipeg, Man. Be sure to write plainly your Name, Address and Pattern Number.

OUR ENEMY

It is impossible for the enemy to win a final decision in any of his many theatres of war. He must stand everlastingly on guard wherever he is. He can never demobilize. He can never remain at rest. He can never assimilate the people or the lands he occupies. We disturb him everywhere. We arouse men against him everywhere, and so nothing he holds is won and nothing we lose is lost.—Walter Lippman.

Death Dealing Bomb

The large death-dealing Nazi bomb shown here was made harmless by Army Bomb Disposal Units who risked their lives to handle it, before shipping it to Canada where Royal Canadian Engineers are trained in dealing with such missiles. The photo shows (left) Brigadier E. G. Weeks, M.C., Deputy Chief of the General Staff and Lt.-Col. E. C. Thorne, Director of Engineer Development examining the bomb while an explanation of the device is inscribed upon the board in the immediate background, while the bomb was displayed at Ottawa in connection with the Third Victory Loan campaign. ## Aircraft Detection Corps Are Watching Skies On Coasts Of Canada For Sign Of Enemy Planes

CANADIAN eyes are on the skies today. From Aklayk to Halifax and Newfoundland, far north on the lonely coasts of Labrador, men, women and children 10,000 strong—members of the Aircraft Detection Corps of the R.C.A.F.—watch far horizons for hostile wings. They don't wear uniform and they have no elaborate equipment, they receive no pay. Their homes are often high duty posts. But if enemy planes converge on Canada it may be these farmers, school teachers, trappers, housewives, girls and boys who will sound the danger signal that will send R.C.A.F. fighters out to meet the invader.

The watchers on the sea coasts watch the water as well as the sky.

Not long ago two fishermen at Cape Negro, N.S., spotted a large submarine. They flashed word to the official observer of their district, E. M. Nickerson, North West Harbor, N.S. He relayed the report to headquarters. The sub was identified as an enemy craft and R.C.A.F. planes went in pursuit.

Planes from the flying training schools, in difficult over isolated territory, have been located by the Aircraft Detection Corps and their occupants rescued.

The R.C.A.F. organized and administers the corps, under Wing Cmdr. E. B. Goodspeed, deputy director. But volunteer civilians make its operation possible. This is how it works.

R.C.A.F. field officers appoint a regional director in each large district across Canada, with the exception of Saskatchewan and Alberta. The regional director, usually a man of influence in the community, splits his large region into small districts, approximately eight by six miles in extent.

These districts are under control of chief observers, who in turn select from five to 100 official observers, depending on the district. Some are housewives, some high school children. All of them stand definite duty watches that continue day and night.

As soon as they see or hear a plane, a ship or get wind of any possible enemy activity they report to their chief by phone, telegram or wireless. Sometimes an observer has to run several miles to report. Telegraph and telephone operators are trained to know exactly what to do as soon as they hear "aircraft detection corps."

Observers are usually on duty two or three hours at a time at an observation post which may be their home or his place of business. Their only equipment is a handbook of instructions and direction indicator card.

TYPE HAS CHANGED

Prince Albert de Ligne, 30-year-old godson of the late King Albert of the Belgians, arrived in London after escaping from the Nazis, and reported occupying German troops in his country are "sickly looking, badly equipped and poorly disciplined," as compared to troops which entered Belgium in 1940.

Christmas Seals

By E. L. Ross, M.D., Medical Superintendent, Sanatorium Board of Manitoba

In the rush of wartime activities and with so many vital problems existing some of us are liable to grow forgetful, indeed even complacent of the menace tuberculosis is to health of a people at war. Health is a wartime need because health is essential to victory.

Tuberculosis increased during the last world war and is increasing during the present war. The disease not only has made advances in Great Britain, but is turning its attentions to Canada. Tuberculosis deaths for Canada last year rose from 5790 to 6057, and, although Manitoba did not contribute to this increase, a rise in our tuberculosis death rate is probable. What can we do about it. The secret is to prevent tuberculosis. Curing it is a costly business. The more advanced the disease the greater the cost, but the least costly is prevention.

There is need for you and every one to be interested in, and to support as generously as you can the programme of prevention and cure of tuberculosis as carried out in Manitoba. We hear a lot these days about mechanized warfare in which an army travels quickly from one scene of conflict to another in motor transports armed with the newest and most up-to-date type of instruments and armament. The Travelling Tuberculosis Clinic is our form of mechanized warfare against tuberculosis by means of which we hunt out and fight it in every corner of the province. The Travelling Tuberculosis Clinic is a motor transport fitted out with x-ray and x-ray technicians, nurses and doctors with special knowledge about tuberculosis. Last year 114 clinics were held at which 7,545 examinations were made of people gathered in from far and near to find out if they had tuberculosis. Monthly chest clinics were held at Brandon, Dauphin, Selkirk, and Portage la Prairie. 161 new cases of tuberculosis were discovered. Think what it means to you and to every person in Manitoba to have these 161 persons, many of whom were spreading germs among their friends and acquaintances, discovered and sent quickly into Sanatoria.

Your buying of Christmas Seals last year made it possible to purchase new x-ray equipment to take small sized films at a much reduced cost permitting the search for new cases of tuberculosis on a much more comprehensive scale. By this new method this year 4,600 workers at the Cardite Plant in Transcona were x-rayed and 1,000 at Canada Packers Limited, and plans are being made to widely extend this service.

This year Christmas Seals have taken on a new responsibility—the financing of a department to assist cured patients in obtaining prompt and suitable employment. This has been a long-felt need and at present is of particular importance when the placing of all workers to suitable service is so essential.

The goal of the Travelling Clinics is to x-ray every person who has been in contact with a case of tuberculosis, to x-ray any who have suspicious symptoms, to review and advise any who are known to have had the disease, to segregate every person with sputum containing the tuberculosis germ and to educate such persons and others regarding the ways the disease is spread.

Public-spirited citizens of Manitoba can do much to intensify the programme of tuberculosis control by supporting generously the sale of Christmas Seals being held under the auspices of the Sanatorium Board of Manitoba for the support of Travelling Tuberculosis Clinics and the rehabilitation of tuberculosis patients. If we have missed your name on our mailing list you can obtain the seals by writing to the Manitoba Sanatorium, Ninette. Your buying of Christmas Seals is a worthwhile investment in protecting your home from tuberculosis. It is a practical way to decorate your Christmas mail and parcels and of extending to your friends your wishes for good health and happiness. Stamp out tuberculosis by stamping your mail with Christmas seals.

The World of Wheat

by H. G. L. Strange

PRAIRIE WHEAT IMPROVES

The "Crop Testing Plan" work for this last year has now been analyzed. The prairie wheat crop continues to show an improvement in true-to-variety. No less than 42% of the 12,000 samples analyzed—each sample representing a farmer's field of wheat—graded "A" which is equal to the standard for Certified seed. This compares well with only 23% of "A's" in 1936, and with only 21% of "A's" in 1931. All this means that thousands of farmers who are now growing "A" stocks are avoiding those losses in yield and grade which they suffered when their crops graded "C's" and "Mixtures". It also means that in every district there are stocks of good high quality seed of different varieties that farmers can purchase at reasonable prices from their neighbours who have "A" stocks in their bins.

An interesting feature of this year's work is that not one single field of an unsuitable or of an old-fashioned variety was found. Undesirable mixtures discovered were those present as admixtures in what farmers thought were fields of good varieties, but in 1931 and in 1936 large fields were found of such undesirable low quality varieties as Huron, Preston, Stanley, Club, White Russian, Ladoga and others.

Following factors have tended to decrease supply and increase demand: In occupied Europe fall grain seeding is behind schedule—Canada will be called upon to ship more wheat to Russia while the Nazis are still occupying the Ukraine—Unofficial reports state that Germany has exhausted her reserves of grain which in September 1939 amounted to approximately 6,000,000 tons.

Following factors have tended to increase supply and decrease demand: The Canadian wheat crop is expected to total 607,000,000 bushels with a "carry over" of 424,000,000 from the previous year—the U. K. Government is contemplating mixing oats, barley and rye with wheat to make a national flour next season.

Creamery Short Course Announced

A four weeks' Creamery Short Course will be offered jointly by the Department of Agriculture and the University of Alberta. This course will commence Monday, February 1st, and is to be held in the Department of Dairying at the University, Edmonton.

Dairy factories in the province have experienced an acute labour shortage during the past season and it would appear that an even greater shortage will exist during 1943. This Short Course offers an opportunity for those with some practical experience to study both the technical and practical aspects of creamery operation.

In view of the labour situation it is in the interest of creamery operators that they do everything possible to encourage attendance at this course and assure their plants are adequately staffed next season.

Details of the course and qualifications of applicants may be obtained from the Department of Dairying University of Alberta, Edmonton, or the Dairy Branch, Department of Agriculture, Edmonton.

Dr. K. W. Neatby
Director, Agricultural Department
North-West Line Elevators Association

Putting First Things First

When this Department was organized, nearly three years ago, we decided that besides providing farmers with various information and specific services, we would put all our weight behind what we considered the two most pressing agricultural problems: (1) weeds and (2) soil erosion.

Only the other day, a new book entitled "Weed Control" reached our office. This book quotes a report, prepared in 1930 by the Agricultural Service Department of the United States Chamber of Commerce, in which estimates of losses to farmers due to various causes are given. Of 30 items of waste, soil erosion was given first place and weeds second. The following figures on losses in the United States are interesting:

1. Diseases of live stock (not including deaths from eating poisonous plants) $ 270,000,000
2. Plant diseases (10 leading crops plus forest trees) $1,190,000,000
3. Insect pests of plants and animals $1,125,000,000
4. Weeds $3,000,000,000

Of course, erosion losses are far greater and, worse still, permanently injure or ruin the land.

One of these days—we hope soon—we shall learn what sort of acreage policy or guidance the government will undertake. Farmers, elevator companies, butchers, bakers and candle-stick makers all depend on the land. It is high time all realized that the land is being damaged. Summerfallowing aggravates erosion unless very carefully done, and coarse grains do no good unless fed on the farm and the manure returned to the land.

This is not white-collar theory, but hard reality. What shall we do about it? In the next issue we shall offer a few suggestions.

BUTTER

In spite of the fact that in some Canadian cities butter supplies recently have not been sufficient to meet the greatly increased demands, the situation does not constitute an emergency; nor is it as serious as some people seem to think. There are two main causes for these temporary and local shortages:

For the past year we have been consistently using 10% to 15% more butter than in normal times—with consequent disturbance to the distribution of our butter supplies.

Many people have been buying more butter than they currently need.

The limited nature of the present shortage is shown by the fact that if every home would reduce its consumption of butter by only one ounce per person per week (for the average home this means a quarter of a pound a week)—or if we reduced our national consumption to the peacetime rate—the shortage would soon disappear.

There is no Reason for Panic Buying

It is unpatriotic and unnecessary for housewives to rush out to beat their neighbours to the nearest grocery store. Butter will not be rationed to meet the present situation. Butter production is actually above normal for this time of year. The Board itself is taking special action which it is believed will speedily restore normal supplies in retail stores.

These supplies will however be adequate for normal consumption, if housewives in all parts of Canada co-operate.

You can help in these ways:

Scrupulously avoid waste and extravagance. Waste is wrong at all times. In time of war it is sabotage.

Reduce present consumption of butter by at least one ounce per person per week—(for the average home this means a quarter of a pound a week.)

Do not buy more than is needed for immediate use.

HOW TO SAVE BUTTER*AT MEAL-TIME

1. Use butter only for spreading on bread.
2. Never use butter just out of the refrigerator. Wait until it is soft enough to spread easily.
3. Add a small amount of milk when creaming butter for sandwiches.

IN COOKING

1. Do not use butter in baking and cooking, when lard, shortening or meat dripping can be used.
2. Use level measurements of butter. . . . Guesswork means waste!
3. When adding cheese to a cream or white sauce, use only half amount of butter stated in recipe.
4. Use paper wrappings from butter to grease baking dishes.
5. Do not use butter for re-warming vegetables.
6. Serve meat gravy to avoid the use of extra butter on potatoes.
7. When adding butter to vegetable dishes, add it sparingly. Do not melt it and then pour on.

Rejected Men May Get Certificates

The Ottawa Citizen said in a newspaper story Friday that "the Dominion cabinet is reported to be considering the issuing of certificates to all draftees who have been categorized as medically unfit and to those whose military training has been postponed.

The story said the reports follow Labor Minister Mitchell's recent statement that employers would be asked in future to check closely on all employees to make certain they are not draft dodgers.

"Under present conditions," it added, "a draftee who is medically examined by a private physician and is found to be physically unfit does not automatically receive a rejection slip."

It added that if the draftee desires one, he could write his divisional registrar for a letter to the effect that he is temporarily considered unfit for military service on medical grounds.

Draft Delinquent Assessed $25 Fine

Veterans Guard of Canada Still Needs More Men

A recent communication from National Defence Headquarters indicates that the Veterans' Guard of Canada still needs 1500 men, and these men are enlisted into that Corps for service, both at home and abroad.

The age for Veterans Guard has been raised to 55 years and they can be taken as low as "C" category. Applications should be addressed to Major J. H. Gainor, District Recruiting Officer, Military District 13, Calgary.

Creamery Butter New Regulation

An order has been issued by the Wartime Prices and Trade Board with respect to creamery butter. No person shall, without the written authority of the Food Administrator own or hold for his own account in Canada on the 30th day of November, 1942, and thereafter, a quantity of creamery butter greater than 75 per cent of the quantity of such butter which he owned or held for his own account in Canada on the 30th of November, 1941.

A.M.A. Offices Give Data On Province

Alberta is already proving of interest to visitors who are making plans for after the war.

Offices of the Alberta Motor Association report that numerous inquiries have been received from U.S. army and engineer members, besides members of U.S. civilian bodies, seeking full data concerning the province. Many sought data on the available lands, roads, hunting and fishing and other sports, with the purpose of settling here or along the Alaska highway.

Thus, it is evident that the foundations are being laid now for an after-the-war rush to Alberta, through which traffic will move to reach the new U.S. highway to Alaska that was opened November 20.

The provincial government's publicity department has stated that since June, nearly 1,000 inquiries have been received from all parts of the U.S. for general data, booklets, maps and other material concerning Alberta.

The application made to A.M.A. offices again demonstrates the part this organization is playing in developing Alberta's tourist assets. No doubt Alberta will attract fresh thousands and call for a major post-war building program, all justifying the A.M.A. proposal that surplus provincial funds should be available for road improvements after the war.

Anti-Freeze Exploding In Many Automobiles, Fire Chief Warns

A warning for motorists to check the inflammability of anti freeze substitutes has been issued by Fire Chief Alex Carr, of Calgary.

The chief stated today that firemen have been called out to five auto fires in the past week believed to have been caused by highly-inflammable anti-freeze.

Chief Carr urged utmost care in the purchase of substitute and said out-of-town drivers should be especially careful due to danger of fire when no help could be obtained.

"We'll hold your place"

IN EVERY city, town and village throughout Canada today there are gaps where once were young men. They heard a call and put on navy blue, khaki, horizon blue, and they have gone, answering a call . . .

They are missed—missed not only in their homes but also in the business places which once they filled.

They have gone from every institution in Canada; but from none more than from the chartered banks. There is hardly a branch office from coast to coast which is not today the poorer—and the prouder—for those who thus laid down their pens.

But every branch manager, as he shook parting hands, had this consolation: he could say, "We'll hold your place. It will be waiting for you when you come back. That is a pledge."

So it is the part of those who remain to serve their country in such a way that the promise may be kept: "We'll hold your place."

There were 14,433 single and married men from 18 to 45 years of age employed by the Chartered Banks at the outbreak of war. 5,053—or 35% of them had joined the armed forces by October 31st, 1942; 1,243 others who joined bank staffs since war began have also enlisted.

Accidents Help The Axis

Courtesy Canadian Pacific Railway.

Despite educational campaigns by the railways and the Government, Canada, in the fourth year of the war, continues to pay too high a price for human folly and carelessness. Accidents at railway crossings in Canada for the first eight months of 1942 numbered 219, took a toll of 87 killed and 255 injured. Death, in the above drawing, watches the crossing, her fruitful hunting ground, to snatch up the innocent babe who has paid the price of folly. Statistics show that these accidents can be prevented by observing elementary rules of safety.

Seven thousand men can be seated, fed and on their way again in 30 minutes at the huge new mess hall in the depot of military district No. 2 at Toronto. A cafeteria on wheels; it is believed to be the largest eating place of its kind in the empire. The tables are set up in the centre of the building, around the kitchen, and the food is wheeled to the men on glorified tea wagons.

A FINE REFRIGERATOR

American soldiers in northern Australia have discovered the best refrigerator, it is reported in Darwin. To get a good substitute for ice water they dig a hole in the ground to take a bucket or oil drum in which they stock bottles of water surrounded by straw. By keeping the straw wet a process of evaporation cools the water in the bottles. Where ice can be had the straw is dispensed with.

Horses In Britain

Gasoline Restrictions Bringing The Buggy Ride Back

A business man in London, Eng., recently bought a pony and trap. It cost him just over $150, and before the war he could have bought a small car—new—for about $20 less.

Petrol restrictions are, in fact, bringing the buggy-ride back to Britain, and over 1,000 people are now visiting every weekly session of one big London horse auction.

"Ride and drive horses," said one expert, "as well as van horses, plough horses, cobs and ponies, are all going at absolutely top prices. A pony will fetch $40, a good van horse between $80 and $90, and up to $200 will be paid for a good plough horse."

Traders form one class of people who are going in for horses in a big way once more, and the $200 horse and cart is now replacing the $800 lorry.

A horse will get a basic ration of feeding stuffs—so long as it is working on essential business. If it's merely taking the master out for pleasure feeding is a more difficult matter.

Depends On The Navy

Sea Power Has Been Basis Of British Empire's Survival

When all the claims of all the arms are tested it will, we are convinced, be found that as in all our past history, sea power has been the basis of our survival and the foundation of all the rest.

Again, as in all our history, we began this war with a Navy which we had allowed to fall into neglect. We had committed every conceivable folly. We had sacrificed in vain the one thing that mattered most, pre-eminence at sea. We had increased our own peril in denying to the Navy its own air service.

But the high efficiency and skill and courage of our seamen, whether they served in the Royal Navy or the Merchant Navy or the Fishing Fleets, have pulled us through. The Navy (London). 2491

CHAPTER VII.

Anne worriedly wondered if the dark-haired Rhea Marshall had witnessed more than the transfer of money from her handbag to Jud's greedy hand. It didn't seem possible that the girl could have heard the conversation; 40 feet of space separated the spot where Jud and Anne stood from the verandah where Rhea Marshall was, and they had kept their voices low—like the conspirators they were.

The Harmons came from Halfway House for the trip into town. Anne said to Jud, "Go around to the back if you want something to eat. Tell the cook I sent you."

Jud muttered, "Yes'm," and roused himself from leaning against the station wagon's fender. He said, "Come along, Wolf." And the yellow dog followed him.

Anne saw the Harmons into the car, then got in behind the wheel. Driving along the lonely road to Sand Flat she replied to the Harmons' conversation in monosyllables. Her mind grappled with the problem that was Erich. She was wondering if Jud would keep silent. She wished she knew how much Rhea Marshall had overheard from the verandah.

Rhea Marshall had heard enough to make her curious. She had wandered out onto the verandah to smoke a cigarette and to indulge her private thoughts and to formulate some plans that were meant to change the whole course of her life. She had heard the shabby-looking fellow—she took him for a tramp—ask for a loan which seemed like blackmail. She had heard him mention that one of the guests at Halfway House had hidden himself in the Lowry girl's car, the guest dressed in prisoner's clothing, but she had not heard him mention which guest.

The tramp had gone around to the rear of the lodge, and she walked in the same direction. She found the shabby man at the rear door talking to a stout man in chef's hat and apron. Light from the doorway gave her a clear picture of the tramp's face. It was as unattractive a face as Rhea Marshall had ever seen.

The cook grunted, "All right, I'll give you something—if Miss Lowry said so. Wait here, and I'll hand it out to you." And he disappeared within. The tramp's ugly dog was first aware of Rhea; the creature came to her whimpering. She said, "Nice dog," and forced herself to pat its head. She was judge enough of men to guess that one way into the tramp's confidence was through a show of friendliness to his dog. She was right. The man chuckled.

"Wolf always likes pretty women," he said. "But there ain't many pretty women that like him. I reckon you're different from Miss Lowry, ma'am. She can't stand Wolf near her."

"But he's such a nice dog," said Rhea Marshall.

"He's the best friend I got," came the reply. "I might say, the only friend. Yep, Wolf is sure a good dog."

The cook returned and handed out a plate of food, looking surprised at seeing a guest there, but after an uncertain moment he returned to his work.

Alone with the tramp and his dog, Rhea said, "Do you live here in the mountains, or are you just passing through?"

"I live over near Sand Flats, ma'am. I got a little cabin in the timber."

"I guess you know most everyone here in this part of the country, then?"

"Everybody who belongs here?" "Nope. She just came here a couple of weeks ago to open Halfway House. I saw her in Sand Flats a couple of times."

Rhea lowered her voice, moved a step closer to where the man sat on the doorway steps. "Did you actually see her when the man in prisoner's clothes hid himself in her car?" she asked.

The man shot her a look. He deliberately selected a morsel from the plate and tossed it to the dog. He chewed on his own mouthful, swallowed visibly. Even the darkness didn't hide the look of cunning creeping into his shifty eyes.

"What man?"

"Oh, I know about him. Miss Lowry told me. He's a guest here now." She paused a moment, watching him intently, then said, "I'm as anxious as she is not to have anyone know he's here. You're sure you won't tell anyone?"

"Miss Lowry paid me to keep mum."

"Yes, but did she pay you enough?"

There was a moment's silence during which Jud's mind seemed to laboriously consider. Then he put the plate down for Wolf to finish; he rose and faced the girl. He rubbed the back of his hand across his mouth, and when it came away he was crookedly grinning.

"You making me an offer, ma'am?"

Rhea Marshall shrugged. She had merely meant to satisfy foolish curiosity, but she didn't know whether she wanted to pay for that satisfaction.

The man saw her waning interest. He said shrewdly, "I guess that ranger fellow would get a chuckle out of that prisoner being here, him going about with Miss Lowry at the same time."

The girl gave a start, though not because of the threat his words carried. She said, her voice suddenly ragged, "What ranger-fellow?"

"Why, Steve Hayes. The forest ranger from over at Squaw Creek."

"He and Miss Lowry see one another?"

"Sure. Didn't you know?"

Rhea Marshall didn't answer. She was silent a long time, and a sullen look was in her dark eyes. Then she said, "How would you like to make $50?"

Jud rubbed his hands together, slyly grinning.

She said, "I'll get the money. Meet me around by the verandah steps. I'll be there in five minutes."

She turned away, and there was a tightness about her normally full and smiling lips. Her dark eyes were bright with a cold glitter.

Steve Hayes came from the administration building when the station wagon drove into the Squaw Creek Ranger Station. Anne was later than he had expected, but during the hour or so of waiting for her he hadn't for one moment doubted but that she would come. He opened the door as the car stopped, leaned in and kissed her without warning. He was aware that her response was half-hearted, and a moment later when she got out he noticed a look of worry in her eyes.

"Something wrong, honey?" he asked.

"Oh, no—nothing," Anne replied. She managed a smile. "Maybe I'm a little tired. We're rushed at Halfway House, and I'm working like a slave. I can only stay a little while, Steve."

"Just so you've come," he said. "We're having a party for you over at Clint Bates' place. Come along or they'll think you're standing them up."

He took her arm, linked it with his, and led her across the meadow to Clint Bates' house, which was one of three frame and gray-painted little houses. Steve felt immeasurably content, inordinately proud that he was about to show off the girl he loved to the people who meant most to him. He knew he was grinning foolishly, entering the house and introducing Anne to his fellow rangers and to the two women who were rangers' wives. Clara Bates, the dispatcher's wife, smiled her approval; so did Ranger Marden's wife Louise. Bill McRae, who always had an eye for a pretty girl, came over and nudged Steve, saying low voiced, "A nifty, Steve baby. I couldn't have done better myself."

"I know how to pick 'em."

Bill gave him a wink, said, "You always did, pal," and moved away to intercept Clara Bates coming in with a tray of cocktails. By chance, unluckily chance, Anne overheard his sly crack. She came and said, "Just when did you always know how to pick 'em, pal?"

She was laughing; the greeting his friends had given her had rubbed that worried or tired look from her eyes. Steve tried to grin back.

"Bill McRae talks a lot and never says anything," he told her.

Bill had taken the tray from their hostess. He came up with it now, offering a cocktail to Anne. "What is Steve trying to tell you about me? I'll make him smile when he says it."

"He says that isn't true, about his always knowing how to pick nifty girls."

"Remember, Anne," Bill said, "I've got no necessity to lie to you. 'If I tell you Steve has been a gay dog in his time, you can depend on it.'"

He shoved off then, the damage done, and Anne looked Steve's way with a faintly amused smile. He felt suddenly warm and embarrassed. Somebody had put a record on the radio-phonograph. Steve said, to cover up, "Shall we dance, honey?"

It was fun dancing with Anne. Steve liked her in his arms. He told himself that nothing was going to take her away from him. Nothing.

"Stop looking so guilty, darling," Anne said. "You'll really make me think you were the Bluebeard Bill McRae says."

He forced a grin. "Someday there'll be a skeleton in my Bluebeard's closet," he told her. "And it will be Bill McRae's."

It was almost midnight when Jim Hanlon, the junior forester on duty that night, came over from the administration building. His arrival had an immediate dampening effect on the party, all except Anne knowing he wouldn't have come unless something had happened.

Hanlon said, "Jake Purdy radioed in. He sighted a light that looks like a blaze over by Indian Lake. There's a lot of lightning shooting about, so he thinks there must have been a strike but he didn't see it from his lookout tower. I thought you'd better know, Steve."

Steve nodded. "Okay, Jim—get back to the radio. Keep Purdy tuned in." He looked around, and his gaiety was gone. His eyes were bright and hard, like the eyes of a man with a job to do. "All right, boys," he said. "Let's pile out. The Indian Lake watershed is dry as tinder."

The rangers went out at once, and the party was over. Steve turned to Anne. "Sorry, darling, but this is the way it works."

"There's danger?" she asked.

"Not if we get on the job at once. Bye, honey—I'll see you tomorrow."

He swung about and went out. Anne was left alone with the two women. They went outside, and there was a pale pink light in the sky. It was a fire. Anne had a queer thought: Now poor Jud would have the work he wanted.

No one knows exactly how far above the earth the atmosphere reaches, but it is estimated to be at least 625 miles.

Weddings.

DYCK—BOUCK

A quiet, but pretty wedding took place on Tuesday, December 1, at 2:30 p.m., in the home of Mr. and Mrs. James Bouck near Carstairs, when their eldest daughter, Florence Ruth, became the bride of Robert Ross, son of Mr. and Mrs. A. B. Dyck, Didsbury.

The bride looked charming in an afternoon frock of queen's blue crepe, wearing a corsage of roses and fern and carrying a white Bible. She entered the beautifully decorated drawing room on the arm of her father, to the strains of Lohengrin's bridal chorus played by Miss Orpha Dyck. The ceremony took place under an arch of orange blossoms and white bells. Miss Doris Bouck, sister of the bride, attended in a frock of tropical rose and wore a corsage of pink carnations and fern.

Mr. Gordon Neufeld, cousin of the groom, acted as best man. Rev. A. Frey, the bride's pastor, officiated.

During the signing of the register, Miss Sara Dyck rendered the solo, "O Perfect Love".

After the ceremony, a delicious buffet luncheon was served to about forty relatives and friends. Those assisting were the Misses Gladys Bouck, Esther Dyck and Messrs. Keith Cochrane and Donald Dyck.

After a short honeymoon, the happy couple will reside near Calgary.

HALL—NOVAELUSE

St. Anthony's Church, Didsbury, was the scene of a quiet wedding on Tuesday morning, November 24th, when Helen Constance Novacluse, eldest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. W. J. Novacluse, Rugby, was united in marriage to Sidney Ralph Hall, son of Mrs. Newton, Didsbury. Rev. Father MacLellan, P.P., officiated. Nuptial mass was celebrated prior to the wedding ceremony. Mrs. Crimmon presided at the organ.

The bride, looking lovely in a ciel blue satin floor-length dress and net veil, held in place with a wreath of orange blossoms, and carrying a white leather-bound prayer book with white satin ribbon markers and bunches of forget-me-nots, was attended by her sister, Joyce, who wore a dress of Nile green satin with matching silk lace turban. The best man was Mr. Willie Novacluse, and Mr. Charlie Newton was usher.

A reception followed at the home of the bride's parents, where a delicious buffet luncheon was served to twenty one guests. Rev. Father MacLellan proposed the toast to the bride.

That evening an enjoyable wedding dance was held at the Rugby Hall, after which the bride and groom left for Calgary on a short honeymoon.
